A LIVING SKELETON

Hightower, same.....

Rosa Lee Plemons, Aged Nineteen Weight Eighteen Pound.
Stopping at the Union hotel near the union depot is the family of Mr. Plemmons, consisting of himself, two little boys, aged about eight and ten, and a daughter, Rosa Lee, aged nineteen, and who only tins the beam at eighteen pounds. To say that she is a living skeleton is indeed putting it mildly. The girl is apparently about four and a half feet tall, and rests in an easy chair or on a bed, being unable to sit alone or walk. Her head is of usual size, and she has clear, bright eyes short dark hair. has clear, bright eyes, short dark hair, regular features: teeth a little large for a girl: her lips rest apart, showing her teeth when looking direct at any one object; she has control of her head and neck to her shoulders, moving and turning her head at will, but has no control of her arms or legs further than to draw them up and stretch them out. While on a bed she rests in a sitting posture, resting against a pillow, and will laugh when spoken to, but her haugh is peculiar, sounding more like a sigh or groan, though from her eyes one can see she suffers no pain. Her arms, hands, legs. feet and body are of usual length, but are simply bones encased in skin, not one particle of flesh there. She has a splendid appetite, eats regularly (by being fed), and makes known that which she likes best, though she cannot speak, but has good hearing. She likes to ride on the cars, and while looking out of the window yesterday she saw a car pass and turned her head rapidly from her father to the train and laughed, and seemed to be exerting herself to get up. Her appetite has been good to get up. Her appetite has been good from infancy, never missing a meal. Her pulse beats regularly, and if she was ever sick her father claims he never knew it. She only weighed one pound at birth, being born in Tulare county, Cal. October 10, 1873. Her mother died this spring past, and the father is now traveling with his children. The boys are fine-looking little fellows, not the slightest deformity apparent. The father appears to be a man of over fifty. light build and of medium height, long gray whiskers and moustache. The child is a wonderful freak and many are flocking in to see it.

AT HYMEN'S ALTAR. The Nuptial Ceremonies of John Broad and Miss Purinton. Oh heavenly love!—'tis thy sweet task [the human flowers to bind,

For aye apart, and yet by thee forever inter-twined: At the residence of Mr. D. T. Bomar and the home of Miss Mattie Purinton, a few of her many friends gathered yesterday morn-ing to witness her marriage with Mr. John Broad of Paris, Tex. If there were among the company any who had regard to omens they must have been satisfied, for never was day more propitious than this Wednesday which was chosen for this wedding.

Bright sunshine and soft morning air lent an expression of pleasure to the faces of the friends assembled in the pretty parlors gaily decked for the occasion. Flowers, emblems of hope, of love and of purity were to be seen at every turn. The mantel was banked with white chrysanthemums, and with these there was an artistic inter-mingling of colors, while over the archway between the rooms were wreathings of between the rooms were wreathings of white and green. Promptly at 9 o'clock Rev. Mr. Tinnon, the pastor, entered, and a hoty hush seemed to pervade the apartment. At a signal the door glided back and a beautiful tableau was presented. The man and woman soon to be made one flesh, stood arm in arm, she, the iovely impersonation of lovely maidenhood. The happy lover stood proudly erect, his here was but one beloved face on earth, And that was shining on him. Grouped around them were those who est knew and loved them-father, mother, brothers and sisters. A short ceremony in Mr. Tinnon's happiest manner clasped the band wherewith love had long time bound them, then friends came forward to congratulate; as the new came forward to congratuate; as the new wife waited with her husband, who could refrain from wishing them all the joy earth can give, and a full measure of that better joy of which naught earthly is able to deraud them? The bride, with her usual delicate taste, was arrayed in a princesse robe of white crepe dichene, elbow sleeves and round neck finished with frills of embroidered chiffon; no trimming marred the sweet simplicity of the gown. No ornament or flower was worn to decorate, where decora-tion would have been "to gild the lily." Mrs. Broad withdrew after the ceremony to don her traveling dress, and in the inter-val the company partook of choice refreshments most daintily served.

The bridal party, consisting of friends and relatives, left on the Texas and Pacific railway at 10:35 a. m., en route for Paris, the future home. The wedding presents were numerous and elegant, and will be prized as souven-irs of affection rather than as treasures for display.

Society in Fort Worth suffers the less of one of its brightest jewels in the departure of Miss Purinton, and she carries with her to the home of her choice the best wishes of a large circle of admirers and friends.

THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. The county commissioners yesterday transacted a good volume of business, that of general interest being as follows: The quarterly report of County Treasurer Brat-ton was examined and approved. It shows a total balance of all funds now on hand of $25,952.04.

Annual convict report, showing work done by convicts for the past four years, ending October 31st ult., was approved. The report shows a total of expense during that time of $51,952.35, and that thirty-four and one think and one-third miles of road were graded and graveled and twenty and one-fourth miles were graded but not graveled. This is a very fine showing when it is re-membered that unless convicts had been thus employed on roads they would have been in jail at the county's expense.

The commissioners' court appointed H.

MR. KERR'S REPORT.

What the City Engineer Says in Regard to the Bridge.

The following is the report of City Engineer Kerr on the Trinity bridge matter, which was crowded out of the council report yesterday, owing to the lack of room and the lateness of the hour at which the council adjourned: To the Honorable Mayor and City Connell.

GENTLEMEN-In the matter of the suspen sion bridge referred to the committee, I beg to report: 1. I do not consider, nor does it seem to me that it was intended by Messrs, Johnson & Flad, that their paper is to be considered as a detailed specification such as is complete enough for the basis of a contract. They say, "of course it is as-sumed that the details of construction will be carefully worked out, many of which are not even shown in the drawing as throw-ing light on the matter." I am borne out by contract. what they say about the general specifica-tions they prepared for the Topeka bridge. They would not serve as a basis of a contract, but were only intended for a general description of the design. They state they description of the design. They state they have answered inquiries put; this is very different from a complete set of drawings and specifications. The details make up a bridge more than anything else about it. The plans presented cannot be considered anything more than a general top and side design. No details (except wind bracing between towers) and no figured dimensions

As to the strain sheet, still conspicu ously absent. It does not appear that the auxiliary cables are attached anywhere to anything except at the center of the bridge where they cross each other. How then loes two-ninths of this go to the auxiliary

3. The strain on the back stays is not nec essarily equal to that in the cables. In the case of dead men for derricks it is some times double. This strain is complicated by the union of the lower auxiliary before reaches the anchorage. At this point again the drawings are entirely deficient in details. I must say again that I cannot think Johnson & Flad intended this for a part of a contract.

4. The objection about not having the cables fully wrapped is reiterated.

5. The diagonals are not cut. Now nothing is said about sequence in building, and it is evident that the suspenders and diag-onals must be all on before the floor can be laid, yet we know that until the load is all on the cables are changing form from a cotenary to a close approximation to a parabola parabola.

6. It is admitted that the towers are so small they have not a great deal of stability on their bases. Has it been settled that the resultant will certainly remain axial? If not, with the extremely narrow base, there is great danger of crippling; why not construct the towers as usually done with onstruct the towers as usually done with

 As to the diagonals slipping, suppose a drove of cattle to come on one end, the di-agonals will be in a state of unequal tension. There will be a resultant in direction of the cable, nothing but friction to resist it. As friction of steel on steel is but 8 degrees, there must be slipping. In East river bridge and others built by Mr. Roebling there are no diagonals and sus-penders are attached by strong iron bands, which are screwed up so as to powerfully compress the wires underneath and pre-vent all possibility of movement.

s. Nearly all suspension bridges do not have two or more cables over each other. The usual arrangement is a single cable at each side of the roadway. The Niagara bridge was the only one built by the older Roebling with two cables at one side, but he never built another that way and did not consider it his best work. When there are men like the Roeblings who will get up plans according to the best practice, why try a new device, and one also inferior? In repairing the Allegheny suspension bridge, it was found that the cable attachtip, at $3.50. Ladies' cl ments at the anchorage had been protected by the best quality prepared coal tar, but in process of time had lost its virtue and rusting had taken place extensively. In resiring it was protected by paraffine. Asphaltum will follow the same experience if time be given it.

i0. The ambiguity. This is one of the principal points of criticism. I merely quote from Messrs. Johnson & Flad. "In the design submitted, which has no stiffening truss, the only means of preventing are the stays and the diagonal wire bracing. The effect of these braces can hardly be computed, and since we have never seen a bridge in which they were employed, we cannot offer an opinion as to the degree of stiffness they will furnish." Thus admitting the ambiguity they proceed to guess at the strength necessary. As Istated last week it is usually allowed to I stated last week, it is usually allowed to have free competition in designs, but not to allow any design in which there is any doubt about the strains developed. I de sire now to state that one of the objects had in view in getting these plans referre was to bring things to a pass so that the projectors would employ what is known in the profession as a pridge engineer, and if I have not succeeded it has served me to little purpose. If the plans were now to be approved by the Roeblings as far as worked out or with such changes as they would require and details engineer to comwould require and details carried to com-pletion it is altogether certain there could be no trouble about our getting a good be no trouble about our bridge, Very respectfully,

H. H. Kenn,
City Engineer,

The Faust Burlesque Last Night-Coming Events.

It was a rather sore crowd that filed out of the opera house last night; sore because their sides were aching from the continuous their sides were aching from the continuous laughter of three hours. There is not much of Faust in it. The play preserves enough of the plot of Goethe's pretty story to serve as a medium for some very clever people to do some very clever things in the way of burlesque. The first act is rather uninteresting, but is still brightened with considerable fun; in the second act, however, the fun begins and keeps it up to the final drop of the curtain. A very pretty effect is obfun begins and keeps it up to the final drop of the curtain. A very pretty effect is obtained in the finale of the second act in the tenon dance that serves as an introduction for Martini, the grotesque dancer who brought dewn the house. Taken all through, the burlesque is a rich one, and though there are points which could be strengthened, the general effect is very satisfactory. The policeman's chorus, from the Pirates of Penzance, was introduced in the second act, and was well executed. It the second act, and was well executed. AN EXPENSIVE STAGE "PROP."

The wax head used in the guillotine scene in the first act of Paul Kauvar is one of the most expensive properties in use on the stage, and is so lifelike that it causes a shudder to pass over the more timid in the audience as the exultant headsman holds it aloft in fiendish glee just after it is supposed to have been severed from the trunk of the lifeless body at the foot of the block. The "set" of the guillotine with its blood-covered blade and heavy massive frame is an exact reproduction of the death-dealing structure which figured.

"Paul Kauvar" will be seen at Greenwall's opera house on Friday and Saturday, November 13 and 14, and at the usual Saturday matinee. "Dorothy's Dilemma," wherever seen this season, has pleased the public, and the role of the heroine incites Miss Rose Coghlan to her best as an artist.
